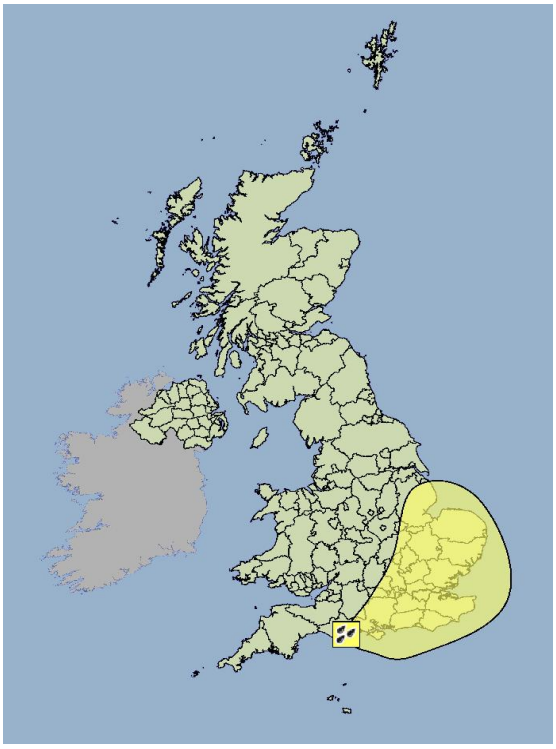
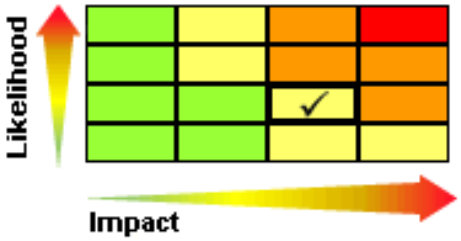
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Warm and humid air has spread into roughly the southeastern quarter of the UK, bringing with it a risk of thunderstorms this afternoon and evening. Where thunderstorms occur torrential rain and frequent lightning are expected. 30 mm or more of rain could fall in an hour and locally in excess of 50 mm is possible in two or three hours.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:30 on Thu, 23rd Jun 2016 until 02:00 on Fri, 24th Jun 2016

Although some areas will miss them, potentially intense thundery downpours are likely this afternoon and evening before they clear later this evening or during the early hours of Friday.

Please be aware of possible disruption to travel and localised flooding as well as frequent lightning.
